

di dibattiti GEOPOLITICA

The US Presidential Elections and the Future of EU Strategic Autonomy

7 NOVEMBER 2024

6:00-7:00 pm

EGEA Bookshop

Reading room

Viale Bligny 22

Milano

FREE ENTRY (SUBJECT TO AVAILABILITY).

FILL IN THE FORM

if you want to stay up-to-date with the Geopolitics Debates.

The 2024 US presidential election is expected to be the most consequential in recent history for the European Union. Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump has promised to reduce America's military support to Ukraine and to raise tariffs on virtually all foreign imports to the US. Vice President Kamala Harris, the Democratic nominee, is expected to be more committed to a multilateral, rule-based international order. However, even a Democratic administration is likely to be more isolationist and protectionist than in recent years.

Two days after the November 5 elections, we will unpack the consequences from a European perspective. As is the tradition of IEP@BU, our focus will be on how European policymakers should and could react to the US election outcome.

SPEAKERS

FRANCO BRUNI Professor emeritus at Bocconi University, and president of ISPI, Istituto per gli Studi di Politica Internazionale

GIANLUCA PASSARELLI Full Professor of Political Science at Sapienza University of Rome, author of Stati Uniti d'Europa (Egea)

GRAZIELLA ROMEO Associate Professor of Comparative Public Law at Bocconi University

MAJDA RUGE Senior policy fellow with the Wider Europe programme at the European Council on Foreign Relations

THOMAS J. SCHOENBAUM Harold S. Shefelman Professor of Law at the University of Washington in Seattle

MODERATOR

STEFANO FELTRI Communication advisor at the IEP@BU

Università
Bocconi

IEP@BU
Institute for European Policymaking

Il GrandContinent

In collaboration with

