Research Project. The general aim of the project is to quantify and analyze the impact of the COVID-19 health emergency in the elderly population and chronic patients in Lombardy. The project is therefore aimed at evaluating how the restrictions imposed by the COVID-19 emergency in these populations have led to changes in lifestyles, such as smoking, alcohol, physical activity and nutrition, increased mental distress, and changes in access to care and health treatments, with a consequent health and economic impact. These aspects will be investigated through a broad survey of the elderly population representative of the Lombard population of this age group. In addition, the project will make use of current health data from ATS-Brianza and ATS-Bergamo.

Job Description. The project aims to evaluate the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and the associated lockdown policies on the health and well-being of older persons. Datasets will include a survey (collected by team partners) and the SHARE (survey on health, ageing and retirement in Europe), among others. The successful candidate should have a large experience analysing secondary survey data, previous involvement in research projects and developing independently scientific papers for submission to peer-reviewed journals. He/she should have excellent quantitative skills. We also require high expertise in public health, quantitative social sciences or health economics. A large experience with STATA, as well as excellent proficiency in english and italian will be preferred.
